1 Introduction

California Health & Safety Code 129895 authorizes HCAI to adopt regulations for hospital equipment anchorage of architectural, mechanical, and electrical components, supports, and attachments including criteria for the testing of equipment anchorages. HCAI's Preapproval of Manufacturer's Certification (OPM) is a voluntary program for review and preapproval of seismic design of supports and attachments for nonstructural components to be used in health facilities construction in California and is limited to seismic design of supports and attachments for nonstructural components, seismic bracing of distribution systems and interior partition walls and suspended ceilings seismic bracing equivalent to those approved through HCAI Preapproved Details (OPD).

HCAI's Special Seismic Certification Preapproval (OSP) is a voluntary program for review and preapproval of Special Seismic Certifications to be used in health facilities construction in California. The Special Seismic Certification Preapproval (OSP) program is limited to components that require special seismic certification in accordance with the CBC 2016 Section 1705A.13.3 OR components that require special seismic certification in accordance with the ASCE 7-10 Section 13.2.2. Special Seismic Certification is a "Certificate of Compliance" provided by manufacturers to assure that equipment will maintain structural integrity and functionality after a Design Earthquake (DE).
